

The Grammarian needs:

A pen; copy of the programme; paper to list the first names of all present and be ready to take notes throughout the meeting.

An enthusiastic and educational Grammarian may choose to research a specific grammar rule, about which they may base their report towards the end of the meeting.

A standard Grammarian will take note of any grammatical errors spoken and by whom. These will be announced in a friendly manner as part of their report.

A novice Grammarian, who may have difficulty identifying any grammatical errors, can report on particularly splendid words and phrases from the meeting. These could include examples of alliteration, metaphor and simile.